

Commissioner Kiedaisch began his career and passion for outdoor recreation as a ski racer and store clerk at his parents Ski and Sporting Goods store. Through a series of progressive management responsibilities in commercial sales management, marketing and brand management at Hart Ski Company, AMF Head Ski and Waterville Valley Resort, he became President and CEO of 6 companies over a 30 year period that includes Stowe Mountain Resort, Bolle Eyewear, Bauer Hockey, The Coleman Companies and Igloo Products.

As CEO and President of Stowe Mountain Resort from 1989-1997, under Commissioner Kiedaisch's leadership, he gathered a team of professionals that revitalized Stowe's on mountain facilities and got recognized by both Ski and Skiing Magazines as the #1 overall winter resort in Eastern U.S. and Canada. He also developed the master plan, obtained permits and built partnerships to build out Stowe's base area village. Gary Kiedaisch has been recognized by the Ernst and Young CEO Entrepreneur of the year award for transforming Igloo Products Corporation. He currently is Partner and Chairman of Tender Corporation in Littleton NH and serves on the Board of Directors and advisors for Purple Innovation, Exxel Outdoor Brands, Fit & Fresh Corporation and maintains his level III Certified Professional Ski Instructor status.

Kiedaisch has also served with distinction on several National and regional governing bodies to include state chairman for the United States Olympic Committee, US Ski Team Foundation Board, and as a NH sweepstakes Commissioner. Commissioner Kiedaisch, a resident of Meredith maintains multiple homes in Meredith and Gilford NH and Gardnerville, Nevada with his wife and are active supporters of land conservation and protection.